

AFTERGLOW-1976

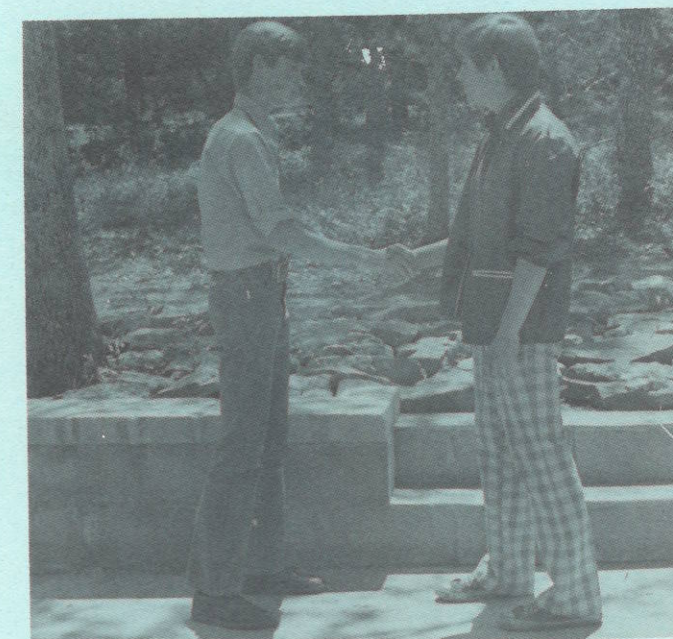

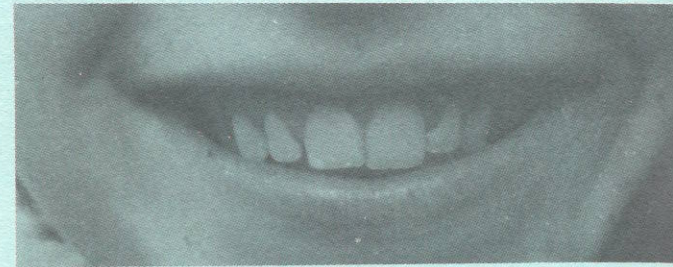

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."

Time—something which all men possess. Some have turned the precious gift into a marvelous treasure, while others have let it wither into nothingness. There's "a time to every purpose."

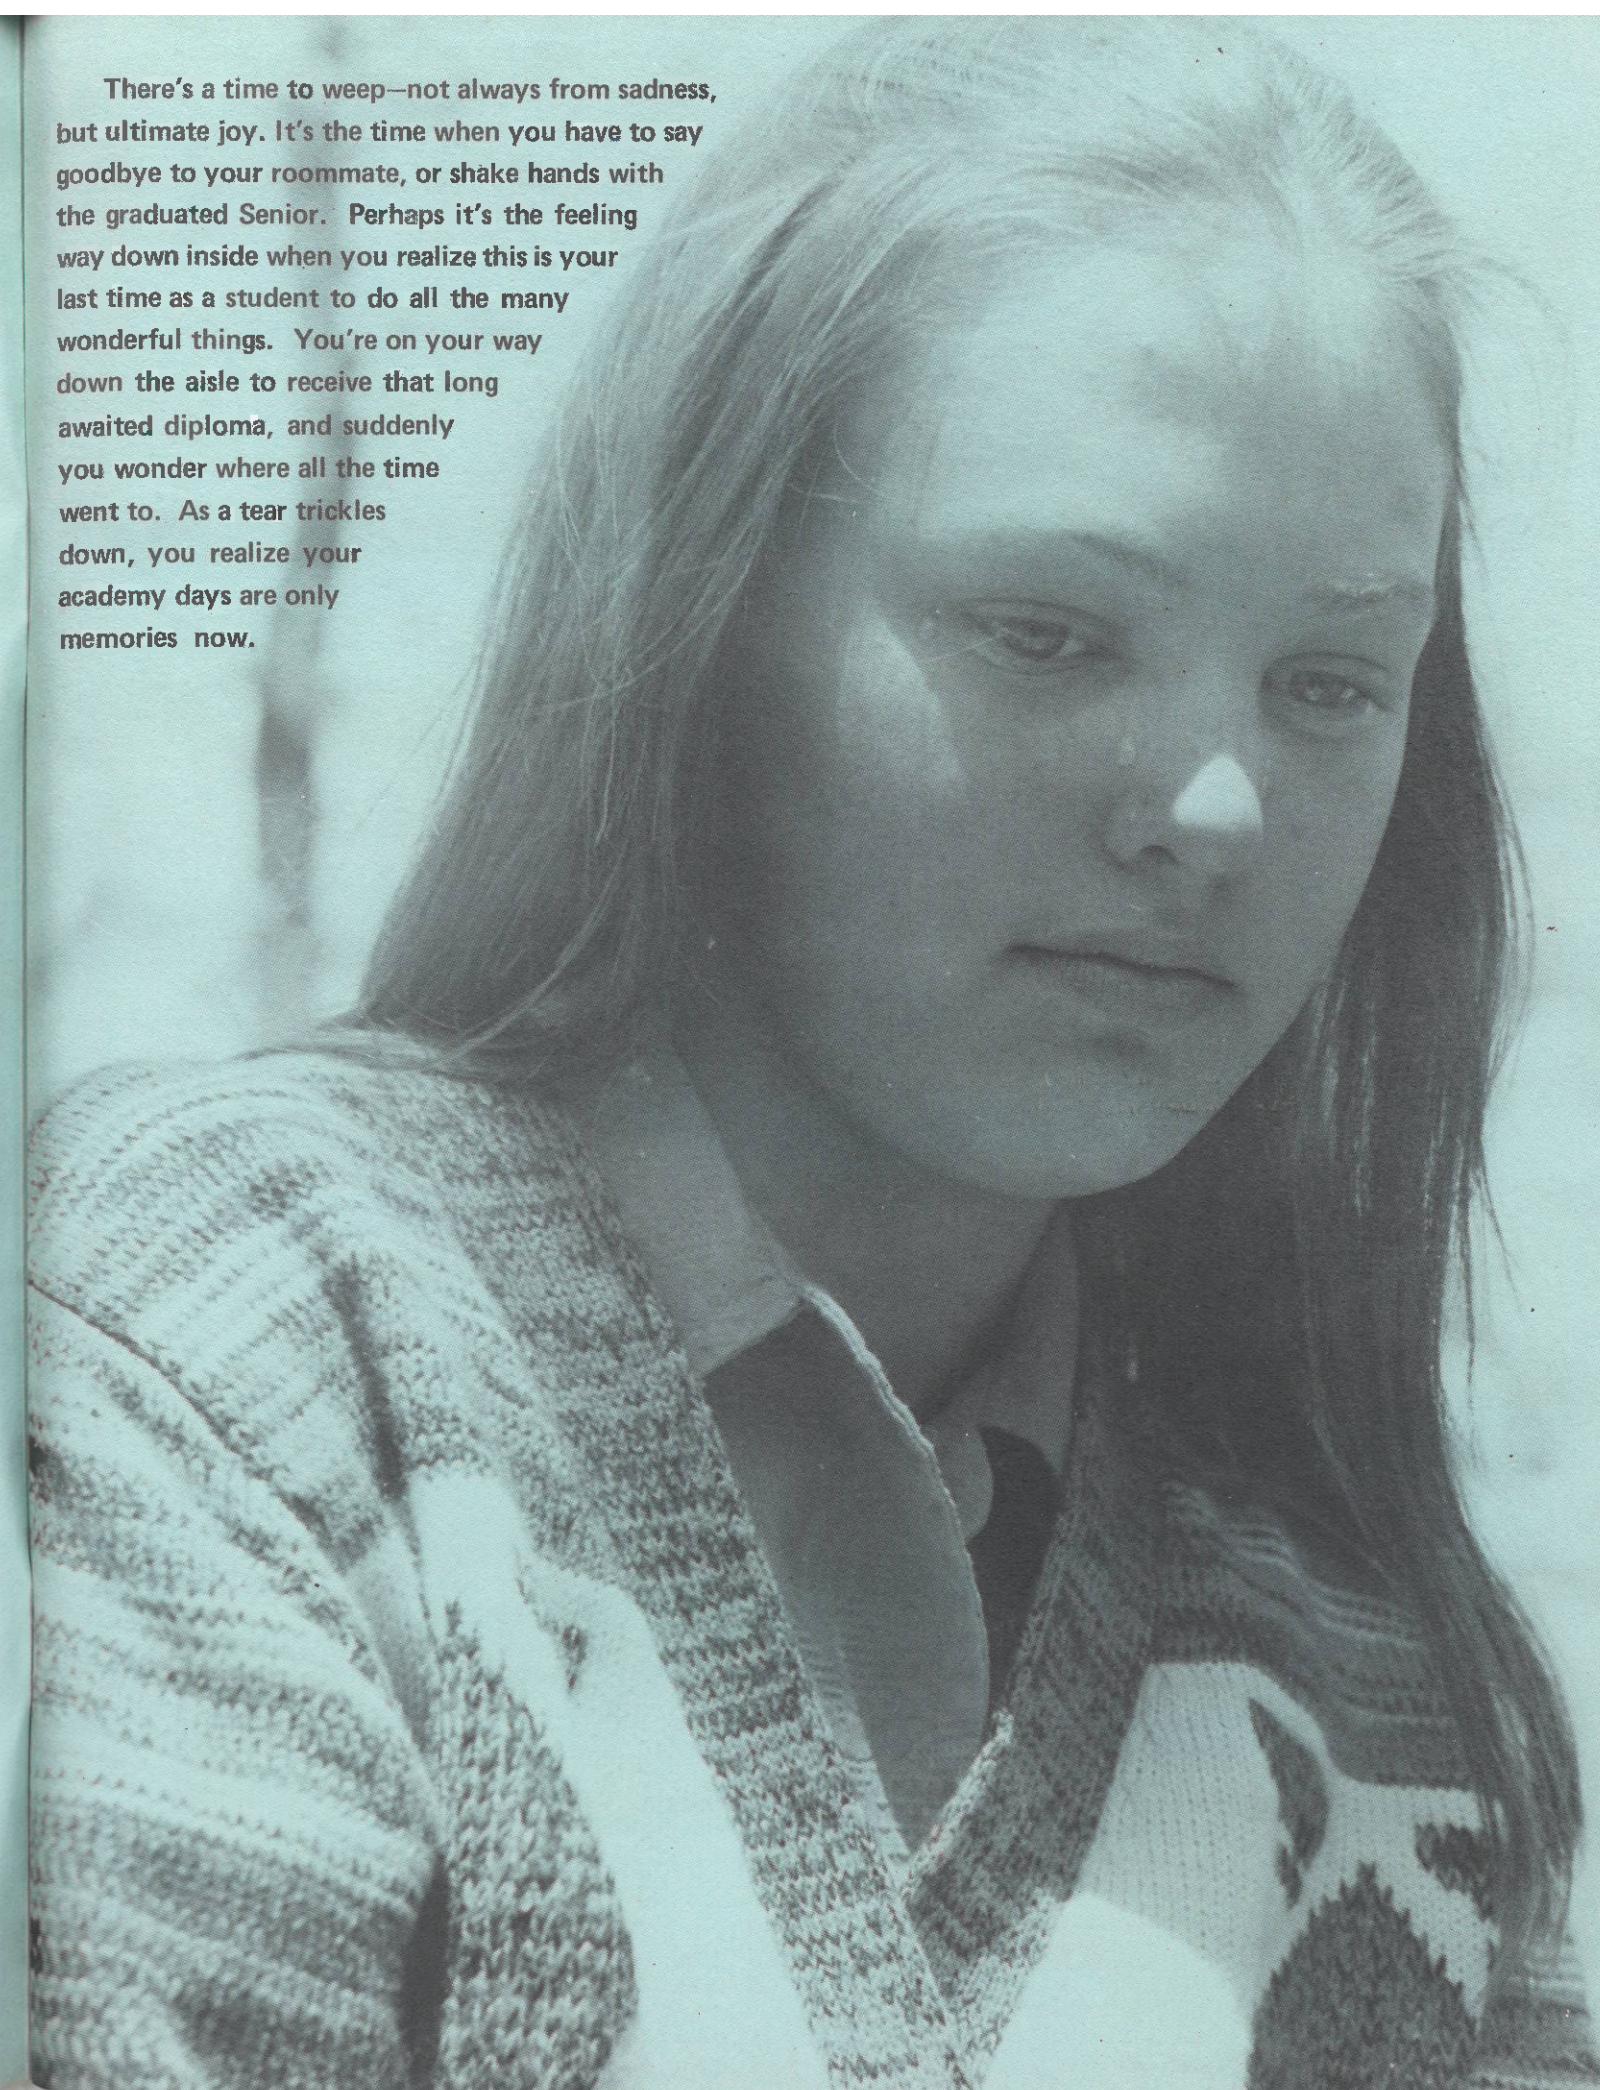

In a modern world that's always moving, time is just a convenient element that nobody seems to have enough of. Amid the bustling crowds, honking horns, racing engines, and complete discontent, there hangs time. Yet time must be understood—not for what it is, but for how it may be used.

There's a time to laugh and be happy—to smile at the lonely girl next door.

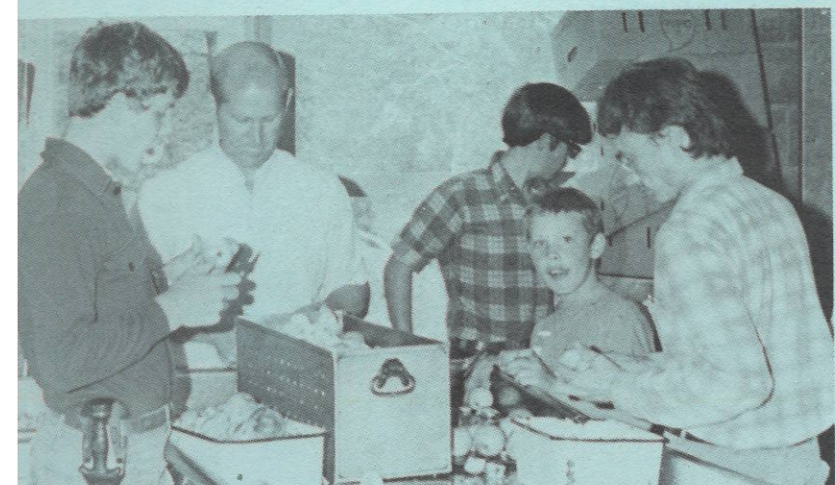

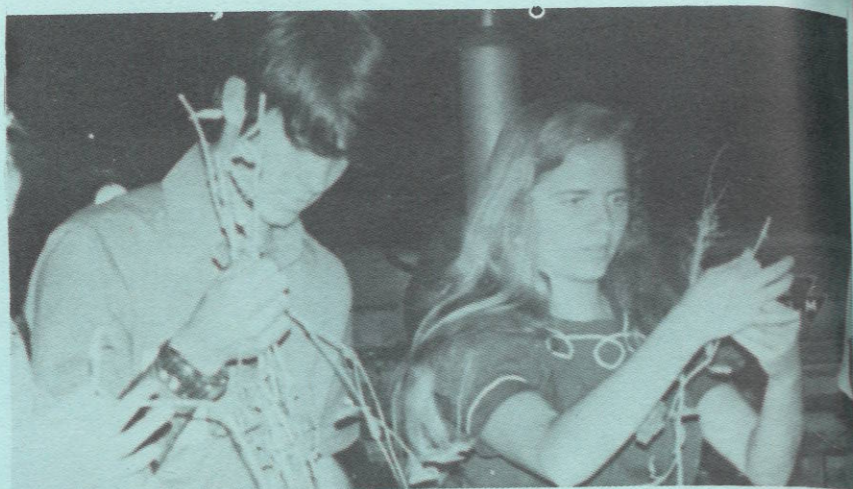

Maybe it's a firm hand clasp to let the new boy know he is welcome in what he may think "a far country."

There's a time to weep—not always from sadness, but ultimate joy. It's the time when you have to say goodbye to your roommate, or shake hands with the graduated Senior. Perhaps it's the feeling way down inside when you realize this is your last time as a student to do all the many wonderful things. You're on your way down the aisle to receive that long awaited diploma, and suddenly you wonder where all the time went to. As a tear trickles down, you realize your academy days are only memories now.

There's a time to work and a time to play. Oh, the joys of having fun together as a group, not just in play, but in work. Remember the bean parties, work at the cannery, hikes in the canyon, and building the Maranatha building together. It's the time the little lady at the sanitarium whispered, "I love you," and your whole day looked brighter.

There's a time to sing and a time to meditate. Each chapel, each Prayer Meeting, each M.V., and each Sabbath all hold the echoing notes of singing. Day is Dying in the West—faded now into the past of beautiful memories.

With a prayerful heart we may look back upon it all. As we turn back the many pages of memory, we see that there is a time for all things,
even a time to end.

Into the latch of memory we place the rusty key,
so as to recall the remembrances of long ago. A longing steals over our hearts, and we wish that we could return to those heirloom days for just a moment. This is the time of the . . .

AFTERGLOW

IN MEMORIAM

(Mrs.) Marjorie Johnson

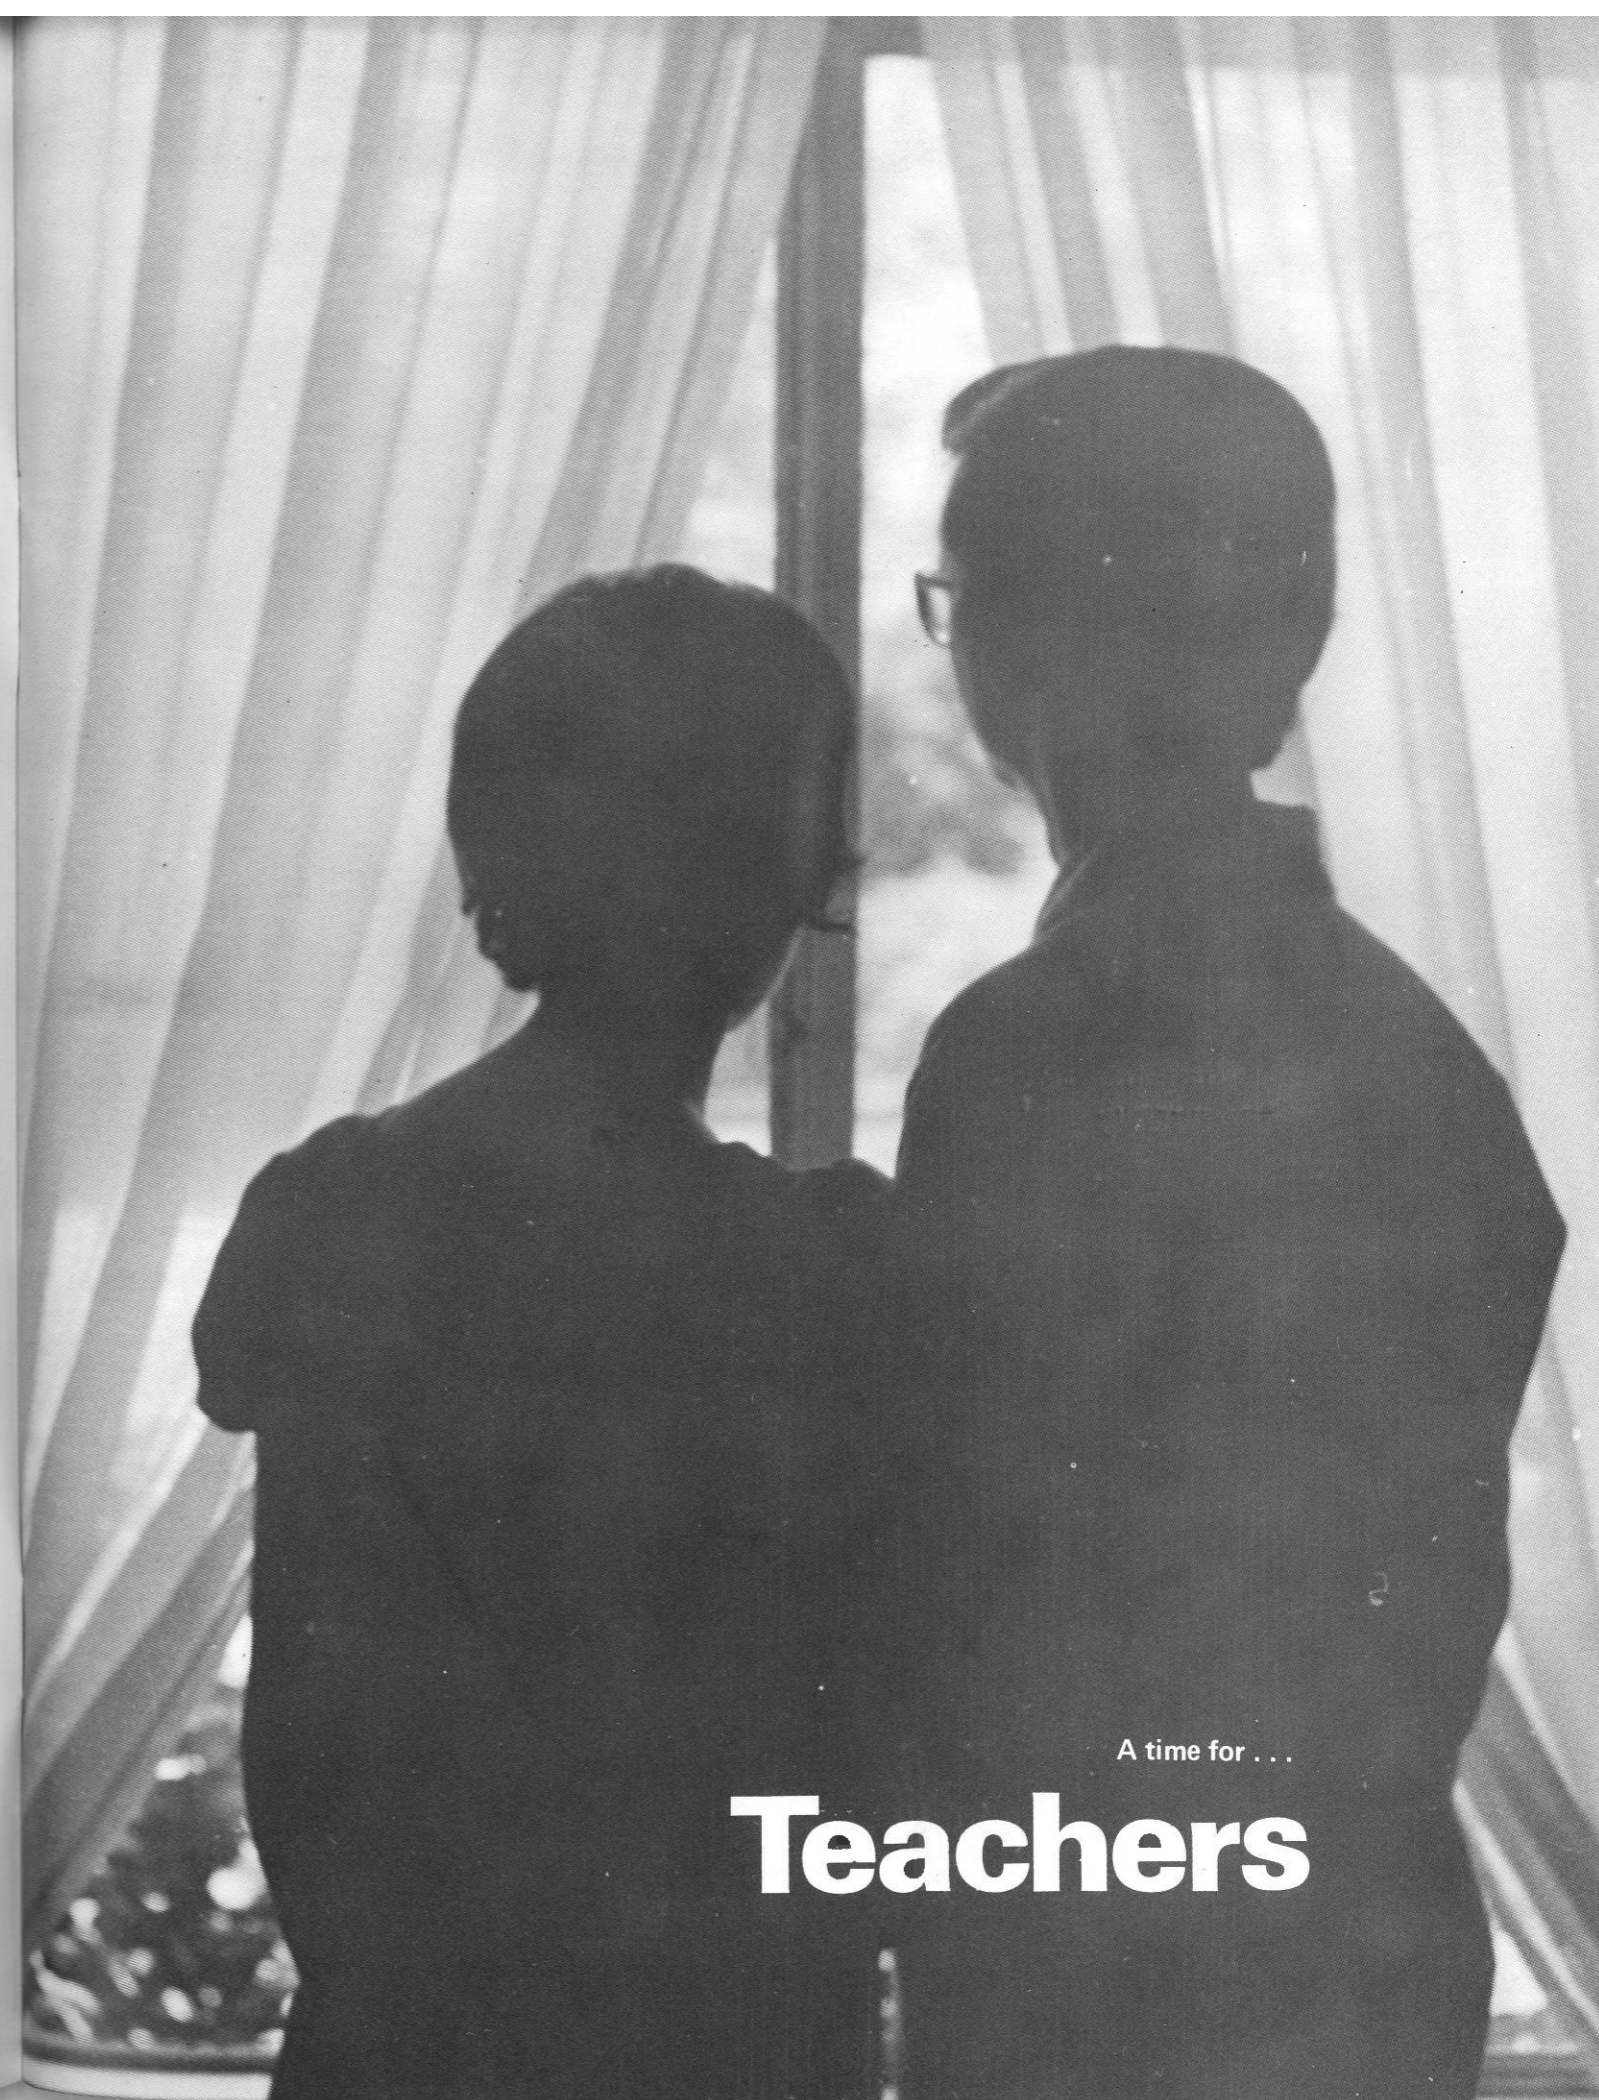

Through the pain she endured and her hardships, through the struggles and trials that came her way—there was always a smile shining from her face. She trusted in God for endurance and strength to make it through each day.

God was her life and light. He shone from her character in all she would do and say. She was a woman of purity and simplicity and yet so full of beauty.

Watching her go through all she did was a heart-breaking experience and yet she was so patient and loving through it all.

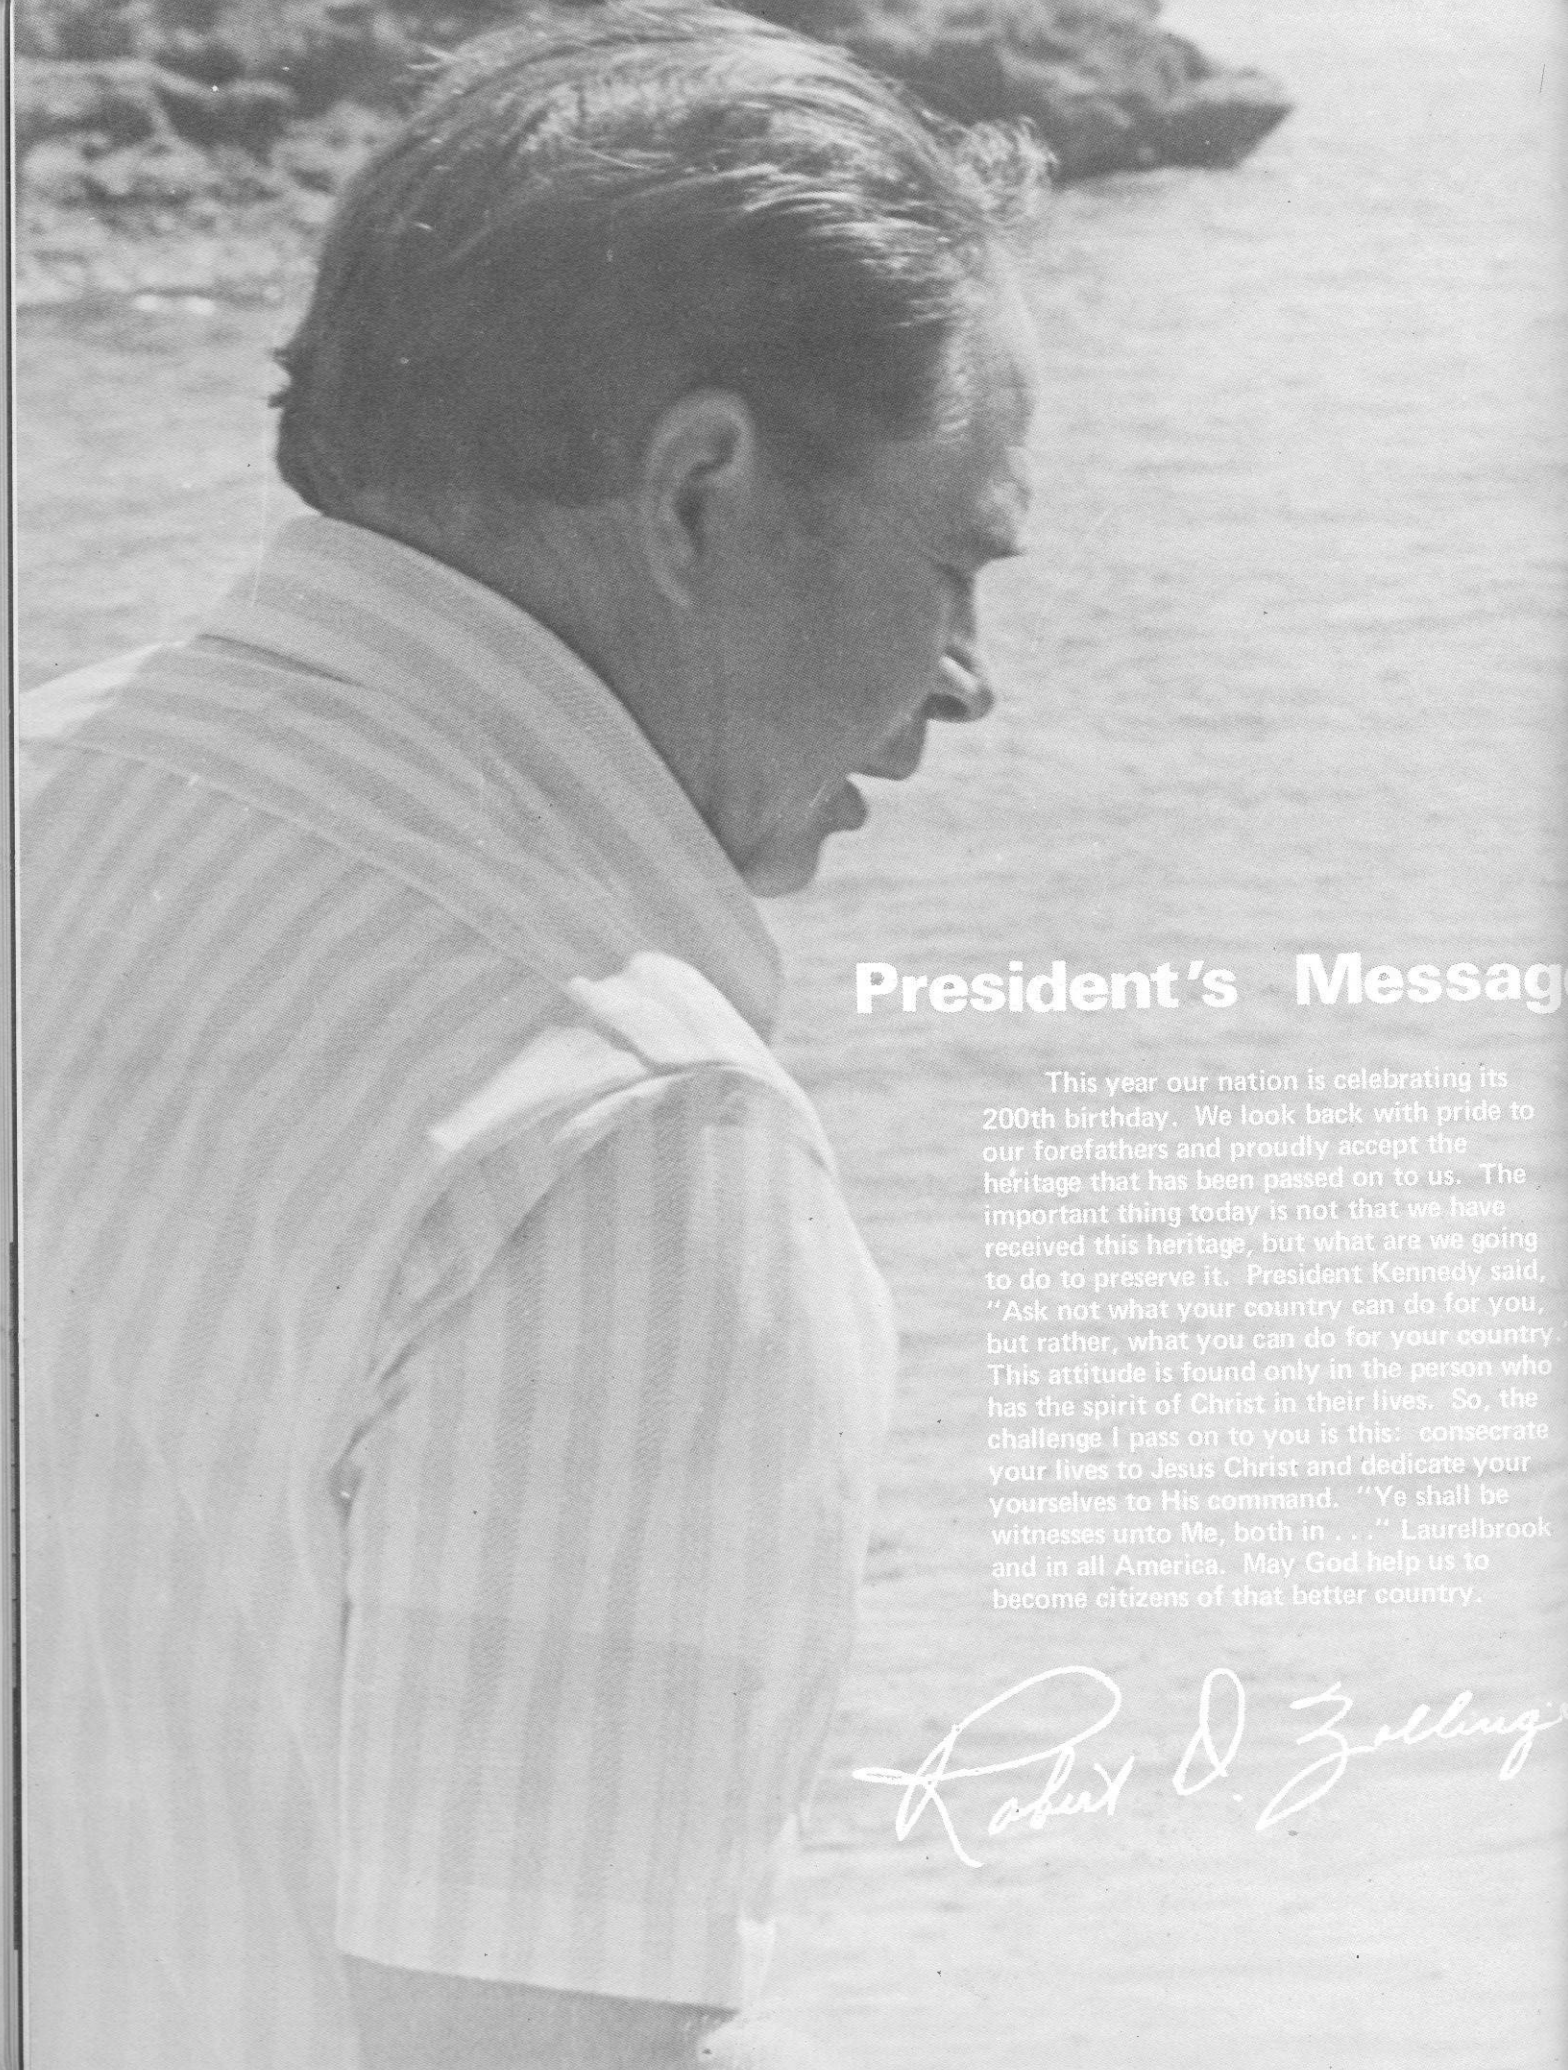

God used you, Mrs. Johnson, as a lesson for each one of us. You were a witness for Him and an inspiration to all.

This tribute was penned by a Laurelbrook student who came in daily contact with Mrs. Johnson during her last months.

President's Message

This year our nation is celebrating its 200th birthday. We look back with pride to our forefathers and proudly accept the heritage that has been passed on to us. The important thing today is not that we have received this heritage, but what are we going to do to preserve it. President Kennedy said, "Ask not what your country can do for you, but rather, what you can do for your country." This attitude is found only in the person who has the spirit of Christ in their lives. So, the challenge I pass on to you is this: consecrate your lives to Jesus Christ and dedicate yourselves to His command. "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me, both in . . ." Laurelbrook and in all America. May God help us to become citizens of that better country.

Fun

By mutual contact minds receive polish and refinement. By social intercourse acquaintances are formed and friendships contracted which result in a unity of heart and an atmosphere of love which is pleasing in the sight of heaven.

Recreation is needful to those who are engaged in physical labor, and is still more essential for those whose labor is principally mental. It is not essential to our salvation, nor for the glory of God, to keep the mind laboring constantly and excessively, even upon religious themes.

Let them leave the occupations which have taxed them physically and mentally, and make an excursion into the country, to the side of a fine lake or to a nice grove, where the scenery of nature is beautiful.

The aide stops a moment to speak to a patient, then hurries about his task. He has been given this time to serve and his job is to mix sympathy and love with healing. This is his work.

Great pots of food bubble under the watchful eyes of busy girls. With the matron's supervision they learn to prepare tasty and healthful food. This knowledge not only serves the institution, but prepares them for homes of their own. To help while learning—this is their work.

The office employee, the boiler boy, the babysitter, the farm hand, all help in their own way to maintain and improve the institution. Each is given a portion of time to serve, to learn, and be enriched by their jobs. And to do our best, no matter where—this is our work.

God

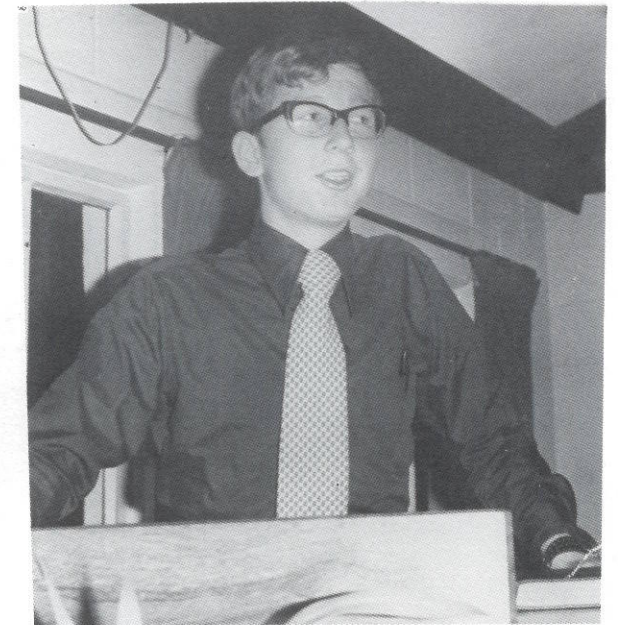

In God we find a sympathetic ear in which to pour our sorrows and perplexities. One that is ever ready to listen to our excited plans, our wistful hopes, and our joyful gratitude. And when our soul is at peace and there's nothing to be said, His soul comes near, and we feel His love surrounding us. This is why, in the quietude of our own little sanctuary, we take time to pray.

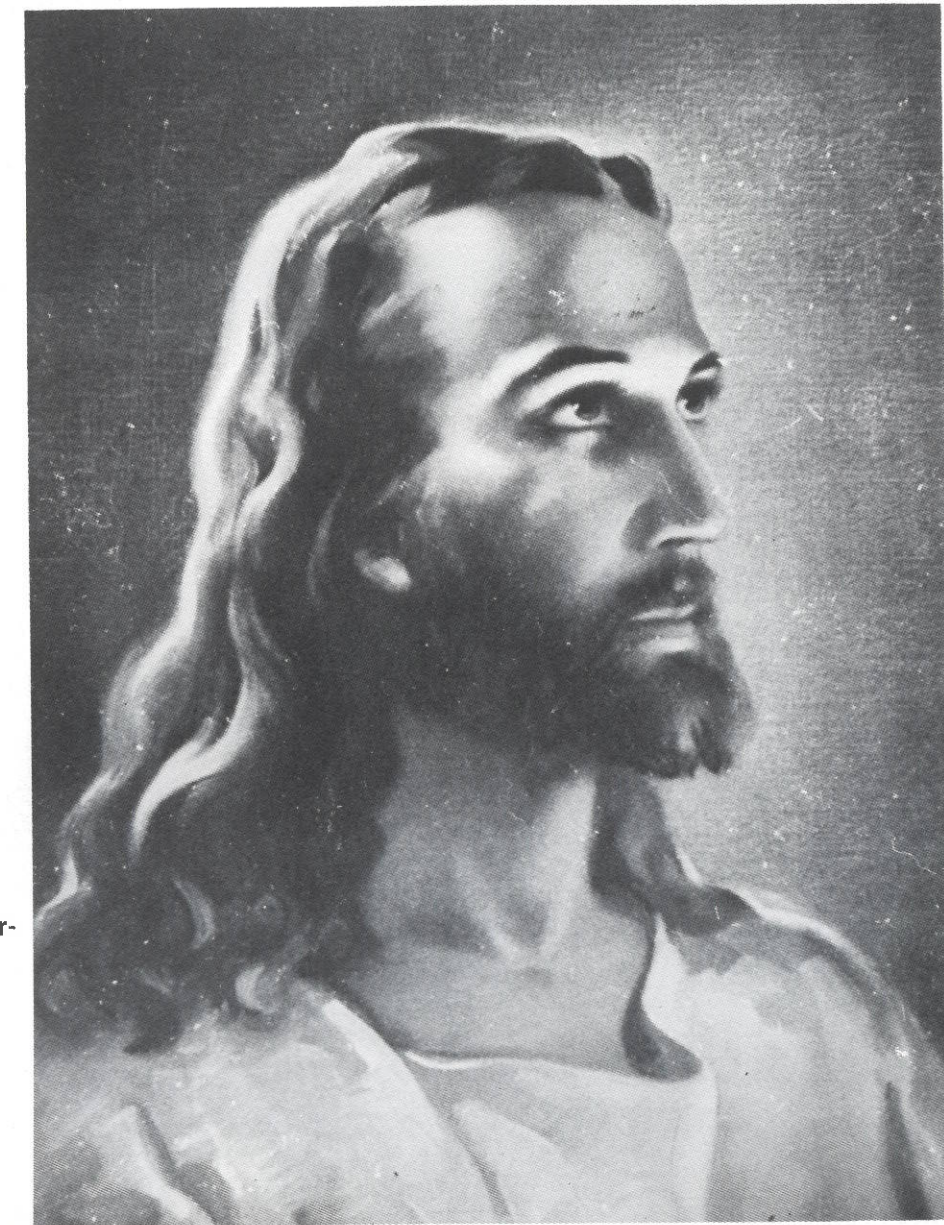

In God we find the inspiration to dream, to visualize a life of service for Him. As we hear His voice in the sacred meetings we are drawn to the Fount of all Knowledge and we hear words of infinite love. And so we take time to worship.

In God we find so many blessings, that we are compelled to tell the world how good He is. We whisper it to a discouraged friend. We sing it before crowds, and from our mountain-top we just want to shout it to the whole world. And so we take time to witness.

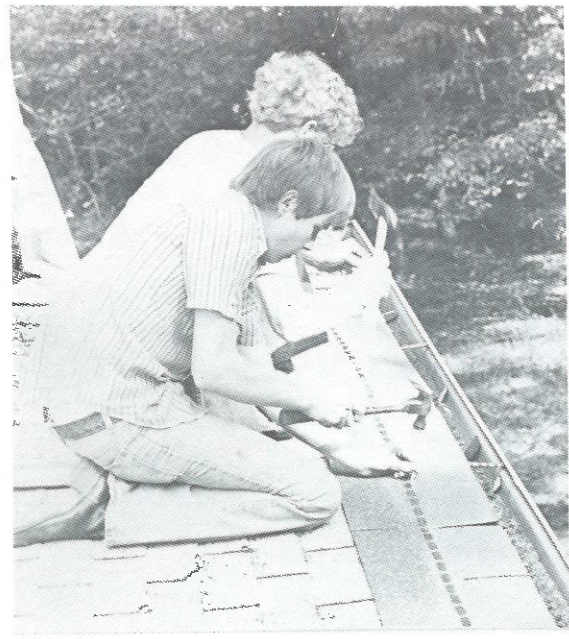

Our school is God's, our lives are His, our very existence depends upon His never-failing grace. And so we take time for God.

Workshops unite our schools, not only in labor but in spirit as we prepare for service.

Alone I sat on the canyon's point
And watched the daylight fade.
I thought of the year now ending,
Of things I learned, and friends I made.

What had become of each minute of time,
Had I made each one worth its while?
What would this year mean in the days to come,
Were the memories worth keeping in file?

I bowed my head, o'whelmed with joy,
Yet a tear slipped unhid down my face.
For all that transpired was precious to me
And each moment came back while alone in this place.

"Dear Lord, the year is over now
Just as the day is done.
I've learned so much, many memories stored
Of work, of prayer, of fun.

"It's beautiful Lord, you're so good to me,
And tomorrow you'll be with me, I know."
And then, I raised my head and watched this year
Fade into the Afterglow.
